OF THE

Biographical Register of Officers and Graduates

OF THE

U. S. MILITARY ACADEMY AT WEST POINT,

FROM ITS ESTABLISHMENT, MARCH 16, 1802, TO THE ARMY REORGANIZATION OF 1866-67.

By BREVET MAJOR-GENERAL GEORGE W. CULLUM,

Colonel, Corps of Engineers, United States Army.

(This BIOGRAPHICAL REGISTER comprises the États de Service of all graduates from the establishment of the Military Academy, in 1802, to 1867, inclusive, giving their promotions, stations, commands, war records, and civil services when they have left the army; a complete register of the officers of the institution, with their histories; a full list of the military posts of the United States, present and past; an alphabetical table of all battles, combats, sieges, actions, and skirmishes, in which graduates have participated; besides much other useful and statistical information, showing from whence graduates were appointed cadets, to what arms promoted, the casualties of service, their religious record, and civil occupations after leaving the army. The work, containing some 2,300 biographies, is published in two large octavo volumes of nearly 700 pages each, and printed from entirely new type, on fine paper, being in amount of matter equal to about five or six ordinary octavo volumes. The subscription price is $10 in cloth binding, or $14 in half morocco, for the entire work.)

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE UNITED STATES, }
WASHINGTON, D. C., February 17, 1868. }

MY DEAR GENERAL—I have received your "Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy," which you have done me the honor to forward for my acceptance. The work ought to show to the enemies of the Military Academy, that if they expect to learn the institution in the minds of the American people, they must keep from their view the services rendered to the country by its graduates. Your book will receive the favor of all graduates, except, perhaps, hereafter, from those who scored against them. "Joined in the Rebellion of 1861-66, against the United States." This ought to be odious.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT, General.

From Lieut.-General W. T. Sherman.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DIVISION OF THE MISSOURI, }
ST. LOUIS, February 15, 1868. }

DEAR GENERAL—I have received your kind note of February 11th, with the two volumes of the Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the U. S. Military Academy, for which I have waited long. I believe I appreciate the vast amount of care and labor you have bestowed on this work, and feel certain you will be well rewarded for it in the thanks of the tens of thousands of families who will pore over these volumes to find therein recorded the brief histories of their friends. I have read your preface, and can hardly credit the fact that any intelligent man will now question the use and necessity of a military education. Men who profess the law, medicine, machinery, or the arts, must first acquire a professional education. How much more necessary with us who hold in our hands the lives of so many people, and the honor and good name of the country itself?

I also observe that you meet an objection by some people in the early part of our civil war, when the minds of all were aroused, excited, and apt to run astray. None of us contend that because we graduated at West Point, we are the less men, with all the passions and weaknesses of other men, liable to err, and even to crime; but the facts and figures given by you are conclusive on this point, that in the great heaving cause that shook our national fabric, a less proportion of our graduates were blinded and misled than of Senators and Representatives in Congress, of Judges of the Supreme Court, or of the colleges located in the most rigidly patriotic spots of our country—Yale and Harvard.

I do not think we claim that West Point can in four years accomplish miracles and utterly remould the character of its pupils, but it has in the past and will make in the future, men more useful in the details of life, more reliable and faithful to their trusts, whether private or public, and more national in their attributes and aspirations, than any other system of education hitherto tried; and these results are cheaply attained by our national Military Academy.

While there is such unlimited freedom to the expression of public opinion as in our country, we must expect the widest criticism and the wildest views; but my observation convinces me that at no former period of our history was the Academy more firmly rooted in the respect and good opinion of our people than now, and I have no fears but that it will always receive the generous and fostering care of the Government.

In the course of my service I have been thrown most intimately with volunteer officers who had not received the advantage of the West Point course; but all, without exception, regretted that they had not enjoyed, in early life, the minute and systematic instruction in the elements of the military profession, which they realized were better taught at West Point than at any other institution of our country.

Instead of learning the same things with the aid of books, they had to learn them in camp, sometimes at the expense of valuable lives.

Knowing the intense interest you take in this subject, I assure you of my ardent sympathy and best wishes for your entire success.

With great respect,
W. T. SHERMAN, Lieutenant-General.

From Major-General George H. Thomas.

LOUISVILLE, KY., February 17, 1868.

MY DEAR GENERAL—I yesterday received, per Adams' Express, the copy of the Register of the Officers and Graduates of the U. S. Military Academy, which you were so kind as to send me, for which I beg you to accept my sincere thanks.

Aside from its value to the graduates of the Military Academy, as containing a condensed and reliable summary of their military and civil history after graduating, it must be a source of just pride to them to see there recorded indisputable evidence of as much loyalty among the alumni of our Alma Mater as can be met with among any other class of American citizens.

I venture unhesitatingly to say, also, that no other institution of learning in the country has contributed more to the advancement of science and literature than the Military Academy at West Point.

I am, very truly yours,
GEO. H. THOMAS, Major-General U. S. A.

From a distinguished Officer of Volunteers.

MY DEAR GENERAL—In acknowledging a copy of your Register to-day received, I take the liberty to say how much curious instruction and pleasure I have found in a cursory examination of its most laborious details. I am reminded of the expressive, stern silence of the vacant place on the wall, once occupied by the picture of Marino Faliero among the Doges of Venice, when I look at your short final record of such graduates as Jefferson Davis and Robert E. Lee. It seems to me very felicitous to leave them and all their barren honors without a word of mention, when they severed their connection with an institution which has been the splendid muse—præsidium et decus—of National Life and Loyalty. It is grand.

Your preface meets my warm sympathy. As a volunteer it was my lot to serve under, with, and over graduates of West Point. I felt the great delicacy of commanding men bred to "le métier des armes" without offending their self-love or my own. And it is a pleasant memory to me that my warmest friendships were with regulars, graduates chiefly; and I have often said that I was, in every duty, perfectly sure of the true, loyal, and whole-souled service of those men who knew so much better than myself whether my orders were correct enough to justify the ready and energetic support which, in every instance of my experience in service, I received. My gratitude to these gallant men is glad to find even this private expression. I honored and felt for them; and my grateful esteem for them all—those who taught me much and those who delicately concealed how much they could teach me, that I ought in my position to know—has left me with a most fraternal love for many individuals, and the highest regard and respect for the Military Academy as a faithful, essential bulwark of our safety.

From a Graduate of Harvard College.

GENERAL— . . . Although a stranger, permit me to express the obligations which every citizen should feel for this most valuable and important contribution to the history of the nation; and its preparation must have involved a much greater amount of labor than you even are willing to allow.

The defence of West Point in your introduction will be of great value, and yet it is rather melancholy to think that any word of defence is needed, when the whole country, and even our heavens, are covered with monuments of its scientific attainments and achievements, and while the paths of the dead are but too thickly strewn with those other sad monuments which speak of patriotism, heroism, and faithful endeavor.

But your pages have a record of the living, which must endear the Academy to the hearts and understanding of all this generation—if we except ambitious declaimers and political demagogues; and for the service which you have done to the body politic, you will excuse me if I take the liberty of thus expressing my grateful acknowledgments.

From the North American Review.

GENERAL CULLUM has finally published his long-expected Revised Register of West Point Graduates. It is a book indispensable to every one who studies the military history or establishment of the Republic; but its keenest interest is for those who are its subject. It gives concisely, but fully and accurately, the leading events in the life of each graduate, from the opening of the Academy to the reorganization of the army, in 1866; and the simple record of efforts, triumphs, and tragedies is the more affecting to the survivors from the close ties with which the Academy has bound together the Regular Army. An esprit de corps, unknown to any other college in the country, is created by the very nature and regulations of the institution. Cadets just emerging from boyhood are separated from their homes and from the world for four years. For amends, they are bound together by constant intercourse and a systematic emulation in studies, arts, exercises, and amusements. They are in constant and familiar association with localities and scenes famous in Cadet tradition for the deeds of their predecessors, to which their own exploits are to be added,—both forming through their lives an exhaustless theme for the night watches in the steaming jungles of the Everglades or the icy mountains of Oregon. And to whatever post an officer may go, he will be welcomed by those who know him intimately, at least by reputation, and with whom he has a thousand common interests. Isolation magnifies trifles; and in the little absolute despotism of West Point, party spirit runs high, and for ten years before the war, the Cadets took sides in their violent political disputes, almost to a man, as they were afterwards divided, in life or in death, on the hard-fought battle-fields of the great Rebellion; and as then, after the dispute, Cadets would quietly fall in and march to mess to discuss over their hash the performance of their horses at cavalry drill, so, during the war, on our side at least, after the prisoners were brought in, it was no rare sight to find a Rebel as much at home in the camp of some former room-mate or comrade, as though for the time every principle of the "little unpleasantness" was forgotten, and the dingy Rebel gray was transformed, and represented to their eyes nothing but the old spruce uniform, more familiar to them both than any other.

This freemasonry seems an obnoxious exclusiveness to some unreasonable opponents who ignore its advantages. It is probably one of the causes of the violent and unjust attacks to which the Academy is so often subject. The Preface of General Cullum's Register gives and suggests facts which should disarm such assailants, and which are invaluable for the defence made by its friends, and for candid inquirers after the truth.

In the first years of the late war, many undeserved reproaches were thrown out against the Academy for failing to accomplish impossibilities, and the country seemed ignorant of the familiar principle, of which General Cullum here reminds us, that for great commanders, ability, knowledge, and experience—all three—are essential. In 1861 there was no military experience in the country at all proportioned to the necessary scale of operations; there was, no doubt, more military ability among the men whose tastes had impelled them to seek West Point, than among the same number in civil life; and military knowledge was confined to the Regular Army and to the graduates. Under these circumstances, it would seem to have been clear where our leaders should have been sought exclusively at the outset. The assembled wisdom of the nation thought differently, and it is an instructive study to compare the places held by political generals in the Union Army early in the war with the results they had accomplished at its close. General Cullum, with the modesty of a veteran, does not refer to this; but the Army Register for 1866 shows, that, of the seventeen general officers of the Regular Army at the end of the war, all but one were graduates of West Point; and without detracting from General Terry's glory, it is just to say that his promotion was rather due to the enthusiasm for one valuable victory than for well-established generalship, and that this victory was of the straightforward sort that depends more on the body of troops than on their head.

But war, if an expensive, is also a thorough school, and the knowledge and experience gained in the Rebellion were so great in proportion, that they were rapidly destroying the advantage in these respects before held by regularly educated soldiers; and by the end of the war, leaders, whether Volunteer or Regular, were fast falling into the places their ability entitled them to.

It is true many West Point commanders failed, even where this was not due to their supporters or to circumstances. This is only allowing that all did not possess the three requisites that have been mentioned. But it must be remembered that the Confederacy advanced its West Point graduates much more systematically than we did, and that many a defeat for the Union was still a success, though on the wrong side, for West Point.

This leads us to speak of the loyalty of West Point graduates. It is a common notion that they were under peculiar obligations to the United States Government. This mistake is well exposed by General Cullum, who argues unanswerably that they were educated by the country for its benefit, and not for their own; and that the event has proved the economy of the Academy, even in dollars and cents. This is clear from a view which the author only hints at. Every Cadet is enlisted to serve four years after graduating. In these four years, most of them—all those in staff corps—have responsibilities and perform duties that in commercial life would command pay enough higher than they receive to amply compensate for the cost of their education. It is difficult to see that the crime of a Southern graduate, in rebelling, is any greater than that of any other government official.

But are we not assuming a little too much in taking the disloyalty of West Point for granted? One of the saddest experiences of the war was the observation of the deep-seated, firm conviction in the minds of many of the most high-minded, religious Southern men and women, and growing from their first consciousness in the minds of their children, that their cause was a righteous one, and that they were resisting an unholy war of invasion; one of the pleasantest sights in a general view, but without much comfort for our side, immediate or future, was that of the active, cordial sympathy of the Southern women with the men,—even more general and efficient than with us. The question was not brought home to us, and it is hard for us to form an idea of the strength and suffering required for a kindly, right-minded man to give up the dearest ties of earth for a point of abstract morality enveloped in a thick cloud of casuistry, and to become a reproach and an outcast in the land of his fathers. If those who failed in this test deserve censure, certainly those who stood it deserve no common praise,—and in reference to these, General Cullum gives us facts and figures of which West Point may well be proud. He says :

“It is unfortunately true that many forgot the flag under which they were educated, to follow false gods. But who were the leaders of this treason, but the honored and trusted in the land, filling, or who had filled, the highest places in the government,—Senators, Representatives, Members of the Cabinet, Foreign Ministers, Judges of United States Courts, and even those who had been elected by the people to fill the highest offices in their gift? Was it then a greater crime for graduates of our national Academy to forsake their country than for the highest officials in every branch of the government, executive, legislative, and judicial, who, from the seceding States, almost to a man, joined the Rebel standard?

“But let us examine this Rebellion Record a little more closely. In the executive department four presidents were living when secession began. Of these, the only Southerner joined the Rebels ; another did the country more harm than an avowed enemy ; while the others, certainly, were not over-demonstrative in their efforts to preserve the Union. Belonging to the bench of the Supreme Court there were four Southern Judges, of whom two remained loyal, one was strongly sympathetic with the South, and one joined the Rebels. The Southern Judges of the United States District Courts sided with their own people. Of the Senators in Congress from the seceding States, but one, and of the House of Representatives, but three, remained loyal. Nearly all the agents of the State, Treasury, Interior, and Post-Office Departments, residing in or from the seceding States, espoused the Rebel cause. . . . Of those appointed in the army from civil life, nearly one half, while but a little over one fifth of the West Point officers left the service and joined in the Rebellion. . . .

“The statistics show that the West Point part of the army has been by far the most loyal branch of the public service ; that nearly four fifths of its graduate officers remained faithful : that one half of those from the South stood firm by the stars and stripes ; and in the battles for the Union, that one fifth of those engaged laid down their lives, more than one third, and probably one half, were wounded, and the survivors can point with manly pride to their services here recorded for the preservation of the nation.”

With these facts stated, the Academy needs no eulogy, and can securely rest her honor on her loyal children, and her efficiency on her turbulent children as well.

The book in respect to taste and execution is admirable. It does not stoop to preserve the fame of misdirected valor, and the only notice of the most eminent Rebels after leaving our service, as though when they lost their honor they had lost their lives with it, is, that they “joined in the Rebellion of 1861-66, against the United States,” with the date and place of their death, when known. The labor of compilation and correction was immense ; the arrangement is singularly convenient, systematic, and happy ; and the result is a new honor in peace to its author, already so distinguished in war, and a new illustration of the claims of the institution he defends.

From the New York Herald.

“After many years of persevering toil,” says the author, “I present to my brother graduates of the Military Academy, this record of their services, honorable to themselves, giving world renown to their Alma Mater, and claiming for their country a place in the first rank of military nations.”

This work will not be considered by the public in the light in which its author modestly regards it, as having its chief interest in the circle of the graduates from the Military Academy. It is a contribution to the history of the country, and just now will be more especially regarded as a contribution to the history of the war. It is hardly possible to over estimate its value in this regard. It contains, well digested in encyclopedic form, a vast amount of information of a kind always difficult to obtain, inasmuch as it is in so great a degree personal. It comprises in its two volumes of over six hundred pages each, “Les États de Service” of all graduates from the establishment of the Military Academy, in 1802, to the present time ; a complete register of the officers of the institution, with their histories ; a full list of the military posts of the United States, present and past ; an alphabetical table of all battles, combats, actions, &c., in which graduates have participated ; besides much other useful and statistical information.

And these “États de Service,” 2,500 in number, though not biographies in the ordinary sense of the term, nevertheless contain the prominent facts of each individual's military or public life. They are the protracted creations of a lifetime, and do not come in the category of the numerous easily-written narrations and so-called histories of the events of our great civil war, with which the press teems, and, moreover, they demand habits of mind, intellectual qualifications, and tastes which are rarely combined.

When, however, such a work does at rare intervals appear, it at once becomes a necessity. No historian can write, no student can read or study his country's history without it, while to libraries, public and private, it becomes a sine qua non. Nor would any one who has become acquainted with the character of this work and feels interest in the civil or military career of any one of the Academy's graduates, or would have a remembrance of the events of our various struggles with foreign powers or of those of that momentous one for our national existence, willingly be without these volumes.

The preface to the work sets forth in brief the importance of military education. It seems strange that it could be necessary to argue such a point, that we could expect individuals or nations to excel in the most difficult of all arts without the study and practice which every other art, or science, or calling demands for its perfect exercise.

Yet we cannot ignore the fact that there are those who depreciate military education, and by the phrase "heaven-born generals," would understand men who, from the bar or the plough, pass at once to the successful command of armies. Such anomalies are never presented. Cromwell, indeed, had little education of any kind when he entered public life, but it required years of the stern teachings of actual warfare to make him the great soldier he became. Great soldier as he was, he became yet greater as a statesman, and that, too, in the same school of actual practice in the art of statesmanship. The arguments against education would in his case be as strong, therefore, as applied to its use for making statesmen, as soldiers.

Many, however, admit the necessity of military education while denouncing the Military Academy as a means to that end.

Against the aspersions of such it is the feature of General Cullum's work that it furnishes so rich materials for its vindication. To showing how the Academy has been not only the means of giving us an accomplished body of officers for our army, but also of raising the standard of scientific education in all the colleges of the land, and of stimulating the development of works of civil engineering and internal improvements, by furnishing the country with able civil engineers, a portion of the preface is devoted; and we think his statements, founded as they are upon the carefully collected facts which the book records, must be convincing to all who are not prejudiced beyond the power of truth to convince.

The author is not less earnest and full in dealing with charges of "disloyalty." He proves that the most loyal branch of the public service, when looked at as a whole, was that mainly constituted by the Academy and its graduates.

In the brief space we can devote to the subject, we can but indicate its main features, and express our conviction of the conscientious fidelity with which the author has elaborated his work, and of the peculiar value of that work to the country, which should be the more grateful to the author, since gratitude must be taken by him in part payment, for the sale of such books seems necessarily restricted.

From the Boston Watchman and Reflector.

These two volumes of thirteen hundred pages are a monument of General Cullum's reverence for his Alma Mater, and of the patient industry with which he has ransacked archives, examined tons of manuscripts, and written thousands of letters to collect and condense the summaries of the services of the graduates of the Military Academy. The work contains the "Statistics relating to the Graduates;" a record of the "Battles and Combats fought by the United States Armies since the establishment of the Academy;" a list of the "Forts, Arsenal, and Military Posts of the United States;" a "Register of the Officers of the Academy," of their "Services and Promotions," and a "Register of the Graduates" from its establishment until 1867. The accuracy and completeness of the work will render it serviceable to the historian, while its brief but frequent narration of services will serve to correct the prejudice against the Academy which so strangely exists. While one half of the officers appointed in the army from civil life joined the rebellion, but a little over one fifth of the West Point graduates deserted their flag to serve in the ranks of secession. One half of the officers appointed from the South adhered to the Union; one fifth of all those graduates engaged in the war laid down their lives, one half were wounded, and the survivors may answer hostile criticism of their Alma Mater by pointing with manly pride to the services recorded in these volumes. General Cullum says that "the entire cost of educating the whole of the seceding graduates, in money, was not more than was saved by the military knowledge of its (West Point's) loyal graduates on every day of the rebellion."

THE BEECHES, Monday, March 9, 1868.

I should do injustice to my own sense of its value, and to the extraordinary pains General Cullum has taken in its preparation, if I did not notice, in what terms of favor I could, the Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy. In my opinion, no more valuable material for history exists in this country. The triennial catalogues of our colleges utterly fail in that for which they might be made of incalculable value. This is in showing what the graduates of colleges have done. They do show when a graduate has become a clergyman, and when one got an A. M., D. D., or LL. D.; but this shows very little of what they really are, and nothing of what they have done. Men get D. D.'s and LL. D.'s often when they have done very little to deserve them. An LL. D., in its true sense, is a distinction for great learning, but when our colleges give such a degree to a man for fighting battles, it is just as if West Point conferred D. D.'s for the same thing. Even the universities of England have got to giving learned titles just as the German princes confer the title of Baron, market overt. For this reason the catalogues of colleges, like the West Point Register, should tell what the graduates have done, what they have lived for, what they have shown to justify a liberal education.

In this respect, Gen. Cullum's Register of West Point is invaluable. If any one has got anything to say against West Point, let him take up that Register, and say it, but say it with this roll of hard work, of honorable service, and of great performance before him. I undertake to say that, taking the average of their years and opportunities into view, the 2,200 graduates of West Point have done more solid work than any equal number of any profession.

Some persons may say that the work for which they are educated is an evil work; that war is an enormous evil. Grant it; but military men do not make war. Wars are made by merchants and politicians. The East India Company (a company of merchants) made more wars and caused more bloodshed than any equal number of officers and soldiers on the face of the earth. And more than half of modern wars have been caused by what is called aggression on commerce. And even the professed ministers of the church, the brilliant priests who figured as the statesmen of the middle ages, and of Bourbons and Stuarts, made more wars than any generals of the army. War is not the desire, but to conduct war is the business of educated soldiers. As long as avarice and ambition make war a business among mankind, there must be men educated to it. That needs no argument.

A graver charge has been made against West Point, that it is immoral and irreligious. The latest edition of this charge is in a letter, professedly from some unledged cadet to a paper in Chicago, and subsequently quoted in Congress. Now, suppose this was actually true, is it not equally true of every college in the land? It is a high compliment to West Point to expect its young men to be perfect when it is not expected of any college in the country. I undertake to say, without fear of contradiction, that there is more restraint and less temptation to dissipation at West Point than there is at Harvard, Yale, or Princeton. What restraint is there at Harvard or Yale to prevent dissipation or immorality among young men to any extent? Would it be difficult to find Harvard students in gross dissipation? Would it be difficult to find Yale students where the laws of the college forbid them to go? On the other hand, it is barely possible for the cadets at West Point to escape at night and engage in some immorality. This is possible, but it is not common and it is not easy. The whole establishment and grounds belong to the Government; the discipline is strict and most rigidly enforced, and the outward temptations small. The public services of religion are properly attended to, and there is a cadet's prayer meeting once a week for those who are religiously inclined. The chaplain stands to West Point in the same relation that the Professor of Moral Philosophy and Ethics does to the colleges. He could do something more if he was entirely relieved (as he ought to be) from the duties of a professorship. I knew a chaplain at West Point to do something I have not seen the professors in colleges do. The corps of cadets were drawn up at sunrise each morning of the spring, in a hollow square, and in the centre of that square the pious and amiable chaplain knelt down on the yet wet grass and offered up worship and service to the living God. I am not aware that the chaplains of colleges do much better than that. But there is in some things an air of religion about colleges not seen at West Point. Why? Mainly because a large number of young men go to colleges for the express purpose of being educated for the ministry; and, of course, there are a large number there who are more rigid and earnest in religious duties.

One great wrong has crept into West Point, which is in imitation of college practices, called hazing. I am told it is nearly done away with. Any institution will lose by permitting that practice. For the older cadets or students to impose upon the young and inexperienced, is mean and dishonorable. It is contrary to the whole spirit of chivalry, which aims to be just, generous, and magnanimous. The weak and innocent are the objects of its care, and to persecute them is alike cruel and dishonorable.

I intended only to notice the Register; but I can only state some general facts. The first cadet, Joseph G. Swift, was graduated in 1802, and after being engaged in various services, civil and military, died in 1865, at the age of 82. The whole number of graduates, from 1802 to 1867, inclusive, was 2,218. In that sixty-five years this country had but nine years of real war, and in those nine years 183 were killed in battle. I think that will be thought a large proportion. But it is not half the deaths caused by these wars, for there is the long list of those who died of disease or wounds caused by those campaigns. Let us take one class as an example. The class of 1841 had fifty-two graduates. Of these twenty-five are dead. Fourteen were killed in battle and ten died in service. Forty-three—more than four fifths—were engaged in battles. The first one on the class list was engaged in thirteen important battles; the next in twelve; the fifth, having served at Bull Run and Chancellorsville, died of wounds; the tenth was killed at the battle of Molino del Rey; the eleventh (Lyon) was killed at the battle of Wilson's Creek; the twelfth was killed near Cherubusco, Mexico; the thirteenth died at Vera Cruz; the sixteenth was killed at the battle of Stone River; the twenty-second died near Corinth, Miss., in the army pursuing Beauregard; the twenty-third (Brannan) was engaged in fifteen battles; the twenty-sixth (Reynolds) was killed at Gettysburg; the thirty-third died of wounds received at Molino del Rey; the thirty-eighth died of wounds received at Sharpsburg; the thirty-ninth was killed at Spottsylvania; the forty-eighth was killed at Chepultepec; the fiftieth died of wounds at Mexico; the fifty-second died of wounds at Mexico. This class had sixteen generals, of whom Lyon, Reynolds, Wright, Tower, and Brannan were a part; two were killed in the rebel service—the Garnetts.

I have taken this class as an example, to show both what services were rendered by the graduates of West Point, and what admirable materials for history are here. No man can write history of any value without a most exact reference to events and dates; nor can the history of the United States, in the last sixty years, be written well without consulting very closely the records of West Point.

History is the record of what is done, and not the babbling of orators, or the verbiage of literature. I say, therefore, the Register of West Point, prepared by General Cullum, is a most invaluable memoir for history. It ought to have been a government work. But our government is a curious affair in some of its workings. Look at the enormous sums it spends to pay Gales & Seaton for various sorts of works; look at the thousands it has paid for biographies of Senators, for books, and this, that, and the other thing—none of which had the tenth part of the value of this register. But let that pass. Human justice is the frailest of virtues. It always follows in the wake of human selfishness, and if you have not the arts of flattery and importunity, in vain will you appeal to government for an iota of justice or a particle of consideration.

I hope at some time to give some brief notice of men whom I have known in my time, and whom these pages partly commemorate. They are to me pages of memories—sad, almost painful to look upon; yet, of such is our life composed, and, as time goes on, this volume of memory grows larger and sadder.

A VETERAN OBSERVER.

From the Army and Navy Journal.

For the last six years, in the press, on the platform, in Congress, all possible changes have been rung on what is called the "disloyalty" of the Military Academy at West Point. This charge, utterly groundless, thoroughly ungrateful, and base in its ingratitude, was connected, of course, with the very natural fact that the best generals of the South (like the best generals of the North) received their military education at the national school of arms. As often as repeated, so often the slander has been repelled with indignant vehemence. And yet, with such persistency is the venomous charge reiterated, that, we presume, half the people in the North, even among the friends and admirers of the Academy, naturally conjecture that there is something in it. As for the accusation itself, it has been partly urged in malice, partly by jealousy, but chiefly, let us hope, through complete ignorance of the facts.

Thanks to General Cullum (whose admirable "Biographical Register," a ten-years' labor, is such a monument of industry, fidelity, knowledge, and skill, as can only be found among those literary products where the love of the work overtops any possible reward the result can furnish), we have now the exact facts and figures to refute the libel upon our national school, and we trust that, in justice, we shall never again, not even when the annual appropriation is to be made in Congress, hear of the "disloyalty" of West Point. We will first present the figures, and then some brief comments.

From this careful and elaborate work it appears that, at the outbreak of the Rebellion, 1,245 graduates of the Academy were supposed to be living, 820 being still in the Army, and 425 in civil life. Of the 820 in the Army, only 184, or only about a fifth, joined in the Rebellion, while 626, or nearly four fifths, remained true to the Union—10 taking neither side. Of the 425 in the civil life, but 99, or less than one fourth, were known to have joined the Rebels, while 280, or nearly three times the latter number, remained loyal. The careers of 44 were unknown; but the proportion remains, doubtless, as already indicated. In fine, of the 1,245 graduates of the Academy living at the outbreak of the Rebellion, less than one fourth joined in the Rebellion, and over three fourths were true to the Union. And this is the record on which is raised the cry of “disloyalty!”

When, in addition, we find from General Cullum’s tables that of the 280 loyal graduates in civil life, 110 re-entered the service, though half of them were beyond the meridian of life, and that of the remaining 170, all under 45 years old, became officers of the Regular or Volunteer Armies, except 39, who, from disability and other causes, did not take an “active part;” when we find that of all the loyal sons of West Point who served in the Rebellion, a greater proportion than one in three were wounded in battle, and one in five (an astonishing record) laid down their lives in the same sacred cause, surely there should be an end to the cry of “disloyalty.”

So much for the absolute “disloyalty” of this “hot-bed of treason,” this “nest of secession,” as fervid stump orators are sometimes pleased to style our Military Academy. Now let us look at its relative “disloyalty”—its “disloyalty,” we mean, compared with that of Congress, of such colleges as that at Cambridge, and of the country itself. For, if West Point be a hot-bed of disloyalty, then are Cambridge, Congress, and the country forcing-houses of treason more fruitful yet. We are assured by good authorities that of the Southern graduates of Cambridge, residing still at the South at the time of the Rebellion, not one tenth espoused the cause of the Union, much less entered its military service. Even in the border States they went for or against the Union, in accordance with the general sentiment of their sections. We have heard more than one Harvard graduate of a dozen years ago aver that, after reading the names of all the distinctively Southern students in his own and contiguous classes, he could not remember one who had joined the Northern Army, and all that he knew anything about had joined the military or civil service of the Confederacy.

Now let us turn to Congress. General Cullum declares that of the Senate but one member from the States that seceded remained loyal, and of the House but three—and they from a border State. All the rest, scores in number, went with the Confederacy. General Cullum further well says that even “the Southern United States District judges sided with their own people,” as did “nearly all the Southern agents of the State, Treasury, Interior, and Post-Office Departments;” of the four living Presidents themselves, “the only Southerner joined the Rebels; another did the country more harm than an avowed enemy; while the others were certainly not over demonstrative in their efforts to preserve the Union.” In one word, no position was high or sacred enough to insure the loyalty of its occupant, no oath taken or “favors received” from the United States could retain a tenth part of the Southern people. And as for the whole Republic, it is fresh in remembrance how it was rent in twain, nearly all the South going one way, and nearly all the North the other. Not one Southerner in ten remained loyal.

Now, turning to the Military Academy, what do we find? We find that of 350 graduates born in or appointed from slave territory who were in the military service at the outbreak of the Rebellion, no less than 162 remained loyal, while 168 joined the Rebels. In other words, while in the colleges, in Congress, in the country, loyalty was so rare an exception among Southern men that probably not one in ten exhibited it, one half of the Southern graduates of the Academy remained true to the Union and fought in its behalf. In the face of this record, and of the record of the achievements of the loyal half of the Southern soldiers, headed by Major-General George H. Thomas, of Virginia, compared with the record of Congress, the colleges, and the country, shall we speak hereafter of the “disloyalty” or of the lustrous loyalty of the Academy?

Much praise has been given, and deservedly, to Harvard, to Yale, and to other famous colleges for their devotion to the cause of the Union. Lowell has immortalized that devotion for Harvard in his magnificent ode, and its fame has spread not less in Europe than America. Only the other day a London newspaper said, “Harvard sent her under-graduates, not by ones and twos, but by whole classes, to the front. These lads, the flower and the promise of the North, laid aside their books and took up the musket, many as private soldiers, to fight for the cause which they saw to be so precious. The list of students who fell by wounds or illness is long enough to make a famous bead-roll wherewith to answer those who say that the natural aristocracy of America holds aloof from her destinies.” It is nobly and worthily said; but not less devoted, not less loyal, not less heroic in battle, were the children of West Point, and their “bead-roll” of slain is longer and more illustrious. Whereas the Southern sons of Harvard plunged into disunion in a mass, nearly one half of those of West Point remained steadfast to the Union. Have we, then, all praise for one institution, and only the word "disloyal" for the other?

True it is that the Lees and Johnstons and Braggs and Beauregards and Longstreets and most of the famous soldiers of the South were West Point graduates; but lower in rank were Southern Congressmen, holders of the United States offices of honor and trust, and graduates of Northern colleges in greater proportions. It was the excellence of the training furnished to all its pupils, Northern and Southern, that put the cause on both sides completely under West Point control. And for these banes there were antidotes in Grant, Sherman, Thomas, Meade, Halleck, Sheridan, Hancock, and so on through all the grades, from general down. Were it our purpose to go into an estimate of the value of the Academy to the country, we should set forth the splendid array of its great names, and the illustrious catalogue of their victories. But it is enough to show what a weight of "loyalty" it lent to the Union. Harvard's devotion and loyalty are peerless, and we are all proud to reverence them; but if General R. E. Lee was a graduate of West Point, General W. H. F. Lee, his son, was a pupil for two years at Harvard; if West Point sent out Beauregard, Harvard sent out a member of Beauregard's staff. Why is it that we hear imputations of "lessons of treason" imbibed at one place, but only of "lessons of loyalty" imbibed at the other?

More convincing than all other proofs, perhaps, of the unparalleled loyalty of West Point is the fact mentioned by General Cullum, that of the appointees from civil life in the Army, at the beginning of the Rebellion, fully one half joined the fortunes of the Confederacy, while only one fifth, as we have seen, of the West Point graduates in the Army proved disloyal. What do those say to this fact, who are wont to say that but for West Point there would have been no secession? It was the Army officers from civil life who, in such a vastly greater ratio, espoused the cause of the Rebellion. In face of these accumulated proofs of the loyalty of the Military Academy, of the unequalled extent to which it held even its Southern graduates true to the Union, and the conspicuous services it rendered to the country, the voice of detraction should be shamed into silence, and, in a reaction of feeling, the long-deferred honor be given where honor is due.

From the New York Citizen.

General Cullum's work is valuable for two distinct reasons: It is of great use and interest to army men, and it fully vindicates West Point from the foolish charge of being a nursery of treason.

During the early part of the war, a portion of the Northern press became impatient because our armies did not at once achieve crushing victories; and calling to mind the fact that the Southern armies were chiefly led by West Point men, rashly concluded that the West Point element, both in the Rebel and Federal armies, was either hostile or lukewarm to the Union cause. The fact that Lee, Longstreet, Jackson, and the Hills were graduates of the Military Academy, was made so prominent that the people began to believe that the majority of the graduates had joined the rebellion. Long before the war was over, the true state of the case became fully known. The loyalty of the great majority of the West Point men was established beyond controversy, and the fact that the leaders under whom the rebellion was finally crushed were originally educated at the much-sneered-at Military Academy, convinced the people that West Point was not the useless institution which some had hastily proclaimed it.

General Cullum, by the inexorable logic of statistics, shows the falsity of the charges against the loyalty of the West Point officers. Only twenty-three per cent. of the graduates entered the Rebel service. One half of those appointed from Southern States remained loyal, and of the loyal graduates one fifth were killed in defence of the flag under which they were educated, and fully one half were wounded in the same noble cause. These figures need no comment, but prove conclusively that West Point was never, in any sense, a nursery of treason.

Of the admirable manner in which General Cullum has contrived to condense the military and civil history of each of the two thousand two hundred and eighteen graduates into these two volumes, it is not easy to speak too highly. The date of appointment and graduation of each cadet, the date of his several commissions or brevets, the campaigns in which he served, and the places to which he was appointed or detailed for duty, the names and dates of the engagements in which he participated, and in too many instances the record of his death, are given with the utmost brevity consistent with clearness. The author has displayed organizing abilities of a high order in the arrangement of his Register, and a degree of care and industry that reminds one of the elaborate thoroughness which he displayed during the war. * * * *

The Register will be indispensable to every army man, and to any one who wishes to understand the true worth of the West Point Academy.

General Cullum's Biographical Register embraces some 2,500 military biographies, carefully compiled from the most authentic sources, and are arranged according to the several classes of graduates since the establishment of the institution, in 1802. Among the long roll of graduates, we miss, of course, the names of such volunteer heroes as Logan, Sickles, Farnsworth, Garfield, and others; but in the military biographies of such soldiers as Grant, Sherman, Sheridan, and George H. Thomas, of Hooker, Burnside, Meade, and Pope, of Mansfield, Richardson, McPherson, and Howard, of Griffin, McCook, Heintzleman, and Kilpatrick, and in the statistics and tables of battles and other military matters relating to the rebellion, are embraced an interesting and authentic military record of the battles and grand military triumphs of our thousands of volunteer heroes against the common foe.

General Cullum, himself a graduate of West Point, is manifestly a loyal man, and closes the biography of all the rebel graduates in 1860-61, with the pregnant remark in every case: "he joined the rebellion." We are gratified, too, to notice the many evidences in the able preface to the work, of how warmly he feels the charge against West Point as a nursery of treason; nor are we displeased with his eloquent efforts to rebut and disprove the charge. He shows by his statistics that 162 Southern graduates joined the Union forces, and bravely battled against secession and rebellion. These, although cradled and reared in State allegiance, he claims, were rescued from treason by West Point influences, resisting every appeal of relative and friend to swerve them from loyalty and duty, and with all Northern officers (save sixteen, who dishonored their alma mater), and 110 graduates from civil life, who rejoined the military service, bravely fought the good fight for the Union. While one fourth of the officers of the navy on the active list resigned or were dismissed in 1860-61, and, being Southerners, probably joined the rebellion, he shows that nearly four fifths of the West Point graduates remained faithful to their oaths of allegiance; that one half of those from the South stood firm by the stars and stripes; that in the battles of the Union, one fifth of those engaged laid down their lives, and that more than one third, probably one half, were wounded, while the survivors can point with manly pride to their services for the preservation of the nation.

Thus he warmly defends his institution, and asks: Can any other college or seminary of learning in the land—can Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Union, or Princeton—all of whose Southern students en masse joined the rebellion—show a higher record of patriotism or sacrifice?

But in nothing does he decry or attempt to detract from, the merits and services of our gallant volunteers. He praises them highly. After eloquently arguing the importance of a military education from the light furnished by the history of ancient and modern warfare, and the lives of the great captains of ancient and modern times—of Cæsar and Hannibal, of Napoleon, Marlborough, and Washington—and showing that knowledge and experience have in all ages been the elements of success, that these can only be obtained either from actual service in the field, at a cost of the blood of thousands, or in seminaries of learning like that of West Point, and that it is far wiser, and certainly more humane, to obtain them through the latter, he concludes his preface with the following eulogy on our volunteer heroes:

"All honor to our patriotic and gallant volunteers who, from the bar, the farm, the counting house, the workshop, and every sphere of life, rushed at the sound of the first hostile gun fired in the rebellion, to their country's defence! Their self-sacrifice in giving up lucrative positions and the comforts of home for the privations of camp, their intelligence in meeting the difficult requirements of their new vocations, their endurance through long marches and weary campaigns, their steadfastness in the darkest hours of disasters, their valor on the battle field or in the deadly assault, their moderation when victory had assured our success, and their return as peaceful citizens to a cordial submission to the laws of their preserved country, are worthy of all commendation. Doubtless none more than they felt and appreciated the great value of military education and experience as essential adjuncts to a natural genius for war in forming the great captain."

It is not every year that so valuable a book appears as the "Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy," edited by General George W. Cullum. Of course, the paramount interest of this book is for those whose names figure on its pages, and for their friends; but it is also an important contribution to the history of the country. General Cullum has been indefatigable in his exertions to make the work accurate and complete.

General Cullum adds that "the entire cost of educating the whole of the seceding graduates, in money, was not more than was saved by the military knowledge of its (West Point's) loyal graduates on every day of the rebellion."

From the New York National Freemason.

This is not a work of brief labor, but of many years of persevering toil. Official and private sources of information have been exhausted to make it accurate and complete. The General truly says : " Archives have been ransacked, tons of manuscript examined, letters by thousands written, and interrogatories almost countless put wherever a hope of gleaming any information at all reliable existed."

The preface is a complete vindication of the West Point Academy from all aspersions. Its reference to the great warrior Masons of the world—Washington, Napoleon, Frederick, Gustavus, Turenne, Eugene, Kosciusko—is flattering to the fraternity.

From its statistical tables we learn that cadets were first appointed in 1802. There were but two, one from Maryland and one from Massachusetts. In civil life there have been 3 members of the cabinet of the United States ; 7 ministers to foreign courts ; 12 members of Congress ; 5 Governors of States ; 132 presidents and professors of colleges ; 138 presidents, chief engineers, and superintendents of railroads ; 75 authors.

There were 70 battles fought in the war of 1812-15 with Great Britain ; 166 in the Indian wars ; 48 in the war with Mexico ; 500 in the recent conflict, in all which the graduates of the Academy participated.

The position of all the forts, arsenals, and military posts is given, and a perfect register of the officers of the Academy from March 16, 1802, to July 1, 1867, making 837 in all—among whom we notice many devoted Freemasons.

Then follows the carefully prepared record of the services and promotions of the officers of the United States Military Academy, making 2,218 in number.

The first graduate, Joseph G. Swift, was born in and appointed from Massachusetts. His military and subsequent career was honorable. General Cullum says of him : " Amiable and sincere, spotless in integrity, staunch in friendship, liberal in charity, General Swift was a model gentleman, a true patriot, and Christian soldier (we add, and consistent Freemason), worthy of the imitation of all who, like him, would live honored and revered, and die universally regretted."

Another craftsman we notice, Jonathan Williams, born in Massachusetts, and appointed from Pennsylvania. During the Revolutionary War he resided in Europe, being the private secretary to his relative, Dr. Franklin (the Master of the first Lodge in Pennsylvania), on his mission to France. Appointed in the army with the rank of major, he assumed the superintendency of the Academy, and accepted various high military and civil positions.

Space fails us even to mention the names of the hundreds of Freemasons, whose memories will be preserved through the means of this elaborate work.

The graduates of West Point, their families and friends, and, indeed, the whole nation, will gratefully remember General Cullum for his patriotic work. No American library, private or public, can be complete without these volumes.

From the Boston Daily Advertiser.

So much has been said, and falsely said, of the disloyalty of the graduates of West Point, that a few facts gleaned from General Cullum's recently published Biographical Register of the Officers and Graduates of our Military Academy, will be read with interest. The carefully prepared tables show that of the 1,245 graduates supposed to be living at the beginning of 1861, 99 from civil life and 184 from the army joined in the rebellion, or less than twenty-three per cent. And if two thirds of those whose loyalty or disloyalty is unknown are added, it would still appear that more than three fourths of the graduates remained faithful to the Union.

Of those graduates who were in the military service of the United States during the rebellion, more than one half held volunteer commissions. Of the graduates who served in the battles of the late war, one fifth lost their lives for their country, and more than one third were wounded.

General Cullum is earnest in his defence of the Academy against the charge of disloyalty, and makes some pertinent inquiries, as when he asks why Congress, the Supreme Court, and the colleges are not equally accused of being nurseries of treason ; or when he asks whether it is more disreputable to forsake the flag beneath which the graduate has been reared, than to stain the ermine of the Supreme Court with the crime of treason ; or when he asks whether the makers of the laws, Southern Senators and Representatives, who trampled the Constitution under foot, were not as guilty when violating their oaths as the graduates of the Military Academy. The General asserts, and we believe he is correct, that the Southern graduates of Northern colleges espoused the Rebel cause almost en masse, while West Point, by the antidote of its loyal teachings, saved one half of its Southern pupils, who, from infancy to manhood, before they entered the Academy, had breathed the poisoned air of secession. These are points to be noticed, and with the author we would do all honor to the noble band of 162 graduates, who, cradled and reared in the atmosphere of State rights, in the hour of trial proved true to their country

The record published by General Cullum of the military and other important operations of the graduates of West Point, constitutes the best defence of that institution which could have been made. It appears that over 2,200 cadets have graduated from 1802 to and including the class of 1867. Among the names not distinguished in war we observe those of Sylvanus Thayer, long the head of the institution; of Robert P. Parrott, who devised the Parrott gun; of George W. Whistler, the celebrated railroad engineer, lately employed in Russia; and of Alexander D. Bache, one of the ablest representatives of science which this country has produced.

Washington, in his message of December, 1793, against the expressed opinion of Jefferson, recommended what Jefferson called a military academy. "I opposed it," says Jefferson in his diary, "as unconstitutional. Hamilton and Knox approved it without discussion. Randolph was for it, saying that the words of the Constitution authorizing Congress to lay taxes, etc., for the common defence might comprehend it. The President said he would not choose to recommend anything against the Constitution, but if it were doubtful he was so impressed with the necessity of the measure that he would report it to Congress, and let them decide for themselves whether the Constitution authorized it or not. It was therefore left in."

In May, 1794, Congress expressed itself favorably to its Constitutionality. In 1796 Washington again presented the subject to the attention of Congress. But it was not until March, 1802, that West Point was selected for this purpose. Mr. McHenry, the Secretary of War under Adams, had urged the matter so fully and forcibly in his annual report in 1800, that its organization on a limited scale took place. Jefferson, in 1803, waiving his constitutional scruples, proposed an augmentation of the institution and its removal to the then seat of Government, a suggestion which fortunately was not adopted.

It is generally conceded that the great efficiency of West Point is due to the arrangements made during the administration of Mr. Monroe, which extended from March 4, 1817, to March 4, 1825. General Sylvanus Thayer, in July, 1817, then Major, became its Superintendent, after having examined the military schools and establishments of Europe, which he visited on the termination of their great conflict, and was the instrument for carrying into full effect the intentions of the Government. In Major Thayer there was a fortunate union of those qualities which produce severe discipline and afford the requisite scope and breadth to military education. Shortly after Major Thayer's appointment John C. Calhoun became Secretary of War, which position he held until March, 1825.

West Point had contributed to the war of 1812 but few officers of great distinction—General Scott was not a graduate—and as Mr. Calhoun had been in Congress during that struggle, and had a mind peculiarly fitted for organization, his first care on entering the War Department was to unite with Major Thayer to place West Point on the best footing possible to enable the country to wage successful war. Mr. Monroe's administration was the last of those that received their impress from the Revolution. It was composed of statesmen selected not because of any partisan tendencies, but for their supposed great ability and tried patriotism. It is not too much to say, that there was unquestioned purity and fidelity and generally a high tone of honor in all the departments during Mr. Monroe's term, and it is fortunate that West Point received the impression of a new and powerful impulse from that administration. It has been treasured by the Professors—who regard their honor as the brightest jewel—and transmitted to successive classes until it reached the distinguished actors in the last great struggle, in which they conferred renown on the whole country.

If Mr. Calhoun's doctrine of the right of nullification and secession, announced long after his connection with Mr. Monroe's administration, contributed to produce the rebellion, which it unquestionably did, though he claimed that this was not his motive, he had also provided a remedy in elevating West Point into great efficiency. In one of his early reports as Secretary of War he said:

"It ought never to be forgotten that military science in the present condition of the world cannot be neglected with impunity. It has become so complicated and extensive as to require for its acquisition extensive means and much time to be exclusively devoted to it. It can only flourish under the patronage of the Government, and without such patronage it must be almost wholly neglected. A comparatively small sum expended in time of peace to foster and extend the knowledge of military science, will, in the event of war, be highly beneficial to the country, and may be the means of its safety."

The Chief Engineer in 1822 reported "that the Military Academy may be considered as having been in its infancy until about the beginning of 1818, prior to which time there was but little system or regularity;" and he added, that a large portion of the students "have been under the necessity of leaving the Academy without completing their education." The support given to the institution by Mr. Calhoun, and the powerful efforts of Major Thayer, enabled Mr. Calhoun to speak of the institution in December, 1823, as "not inferior to any similar institution in any country."

The Southern tendencies of Mr. Calhoun were indicated even at this early day by a recommendation to establish another institution of like character in the Southern States; but it is fortunate that the recommendation was not adopted, as both would have been more or less sectional, whereas the important fact that a large number of those educated at West Point from the Southern States remained true to the Union—General George H. Thomas is the most signal instance—proves that the influence of the institution was not as unfortunate as has been often alleged.

A curious examiner into the law of compensation will find in the far-seeing circumspection and sagacity of Mr. Calhoun as Secretary of War, and in the policy of nullification and secession to which he was subsequently committed—the good a partial remedy for the evil—much to interest him in weighing and comparing these different measures. Certain it is that it required the exercise of forethought and diligence at this early period to prepare for a war that happened only about thirty-six years after Mr. Monroe's administration had ceased. The term of Mr. Adams, which succeeded, was not favorable for such improvement, as supplies were rigidly withheld and party spirit ran high. Nor was the term of General Jackson favorable for that purpose, as he was an improvised soldier, not especially friendly to West Point, and there were other subjects to engage the attention of his Cabinet, arising from the violence of party action during his whole term.

Reflection will perhaps show us that the organization of West Point, on a basis such as would enable the country to conduct war with the highest skill, could have taken place at no period with such advantage as during the administration of President Monroe, and it is to be regretted that General Cullum, in a work so valuable and likely to be so enduring, should have omitted, in his able preface, to trace to their true cause, so far as external management is concerned, the good results in skill and science, and, what is equally important, in honor and patriotism, among the officers of West Point which the war developed, and which have rendered that institution hereafter safe.

It needed a concurrence in both the excellence of the instruction imparted and the peculiar relation of the students to render the efficiency of the institution complete. The cadets instead of paying are paid, and are the subjects of military rule. While in our colleges there is some yielding on the part of their professors to pecuniary interests, such interests as between professors and cadets in no manner interfere with the efforts made at West Point to render military education complete, and to impress upon it a character of nationality.

From the New York Evening Post.

THE COST AND PROFIT OF WEST POINT.

General Cullum's Biographical Register of West Point, of which we spoke a few days ago, has some interesting particulars of the services which the West Point Academy has done the country.

The establishment of a military school was one of the hobbies of General Washington. During the war for independence he had learned the practical importance of thorough military education. Congress, in that struggle, was compelled to ask Louis XVI. for engineers; and General Charles Lee said, with his habitual sneer, that there was not an officer in the Continental army who knew "*the difference betwixt a cheval-de-frise and a cabbage garden.*" Every one recognizes the greatness of our debt to Steuben, Kosciusko, and others, who gave us the benefit of their study and training in the European wars. Some of our own officers were, perhaps, a little jealous of their more accomplished comrades of foreign birth, but Washington did not share the feeling; in his last annual message to Congress he forcibly reiterated his conviction that the country should train up a class of such officers taken from among our own youth: "Whatever arguments may be drawn from particular examples, superficially viewed, a thorough examination of the subject will evince that the art of war is both comprehensive and complicated; that it demands much previous study, and that the possession of it in its most improved and perfect state, is always of great moment to the security of a nation. This, therefore ought to be a serious care of every government, and for this purpose an academy, where a regular course of instruction is given, is an obvious experiment which different nations have successfully employed."

The bill for the erection of a Military Academy of the United States, was reported to the House of Representatives, March 19, 1800, by Mr. Harrison G. Otis, of Massachusetts; Mr. Nathaniel Macon, of North Carolina, moved that the bill be rejected; the motion was lost; but a few days later, Mr. Joseph Eggleston, of Virginia, procured the postponement of the bill by a vote of sixty-four to twenty-three. It was not until 1802 that the measure became a law.

The Academy, however, had only the cold shoulder of the administration which in the mean time had come into power, and its early years were not very prosperous. The result of this policy was, that when the second war with England broke out, there were but sixty-five West Point men in the service. In the course of that war the record of the first two years shows in the army little but bad generalship, blunders, and defeats. Americans, however, learn war rapidly in the field, and the last campaigns were more creditable to our arms. In these campaigns West Point men took a conspicuous part. Of those in active service, one sixth were killed, one twelfth were wounded, and one-fifth of those who survived received one or more brevets for gallantry and meritorious conduct.

During the thirty years which followed the close of this war, the officers of the regular army were employed in fighting the Indians, a training which, although useful, was yet very incomplete. At the breaking out of the war with Mexico, five hundred graduates of the Academy were in the service, and many others re-entered it from the occupations of civil life. In this war the utility of military education was strikingly proved. In less than a year and a half our small army in Mexico won thirty battles, took forty thousand prisoners, a thousand cannon, besides an immense amount of small arms and munitions of war, ten fortified places, and the capital of the enemy, and acquired territory for the country which now yields every year a revenue equal to three times the whole cost of the contest. General Scott, himself not a West Point graduate, thus summed up the lessons of this war: "I give it as my fixed opinion that, but for our graduated cadets, the war between the United States and Mexico might, and probably would, have lasted some four or five years, within its first half more defeat than victories falling to our share."

These two brilliant campaigns gave an extravagant fame to the Military Academy, which at the breaking out of the rebellion, worked to its injury. The people expected impossibilities of it. In General Cullum's words, "the youthful graduates, who perhaps had never commanded a larger force than a company, or a battalion, were expected at once to lead vast armies of undisciplined troops through unknown morasses and tangled wildernesses to assured victory." It was inevitable that the popular expectation should be disappointed, and that West Point should thereupon be as extravagantly decried as it had been extravagantly lauded. In this reaction of public feeling, the fact that the rebel armies were led by West Point men was argued with pertinacity as an additional argument against the usefulness of the Academy.

But as the war went on West Point men steadily replaced the officers appointed from civil life in the higher commands. Men who before had had experience only in petty war, learned with wonderful facility to practise grand strategy, and successfully conduct campaigns of unparalleled difficulty and importance. Grant and Sherman reached their proper places. The annals of the last years of the war justify General Cullum's boast that the "cost of educating the whole of the seceding graduates was not more than was saved by the military knowledge of loyal graduates on every day of the rebellion."

The West Point Academy has given the country between two and three thousand educated officers; has procured for our army a world-wide reputation; and, at the breaking out of the rebellion, it kept nearly one half its Southern graduates loyal to their country; yet it has never received, in any single year, an appropriation larger than is required to maintain a squadron of cavalry; and has not cost the country, from 1802 to the present time, a greater sum than was spent in any single week of the last years of the rebellion.

From the New York Times.

We know of no single contribution to the military history of the nation so rich in invaluable data and so essential to the future historian or student of American history as the volumes with the above title. The author, a distinguished officer of the Engineers, and lately Superintendent of the Academy, is himself an élève of the "Cherished Alma Mater," with which he has been many years immediately connected as "Instructor of Practical Engineering," and more recently as its Superintendent. Devoted to his corps, to the Academy, and to the honor of the service to which the Military Academy is so important an adjunct; admirably qualified by study of the exact sciences and of the best ancient and modern histories, and by natural and mental endowments for labors of profound research and patient investigation, the graduates of the Academy are indeed fortunate in their military biographer. For no institution in the world does there exist so full and complete a record of its officers, teachers, and graduates, as we now have for the United States Military Academy.

The execution of this task has been by no means an official duty, but was undertaken rather in payment of a debt of gratitude to the author's Alma Mater, which had bestowed upon him a valuable education and habits of usefulness.

It was, we believe, as long back as the year 1848, that the then Superintendent of the Military Academy, Capt. (now Brevet Brig.-General) Henry Brewerton, believing that a period had arrived when some formal and complete record of the services of the numerous graduates which the institution had matriculated during the many years of its existence, would be not only a convincing evidence of its usefulness, but a most valuable book of reference, adopted the idea of a work which should be not only a "Register" of the names and dates of appointment and graduation of all the graduates, but a brief record of their promotions in the army or of their occupations in civil life after graduation. The author was then Instructor of Practical Engineering at the Academy. The task was first assigned to other hands, but it soon became evident that it was an undertaking to execute which, thoroughly and fittingly, but few possessed the requisite qualifications or habits of mind, and almost naturally, we may say, it soon devolved upon him. "The Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy," from 1802 to 1850, was thus the germ of the present important work, and, valuable as it was, yet, as compared with the book before us, it is as the acorn to the fully developed oak.

These remarks we deem appropriate, that the reader may fully understand that these volumes are not hasty gatherings together of such notes as could be speedily laid hands on, but an ordinary life's labor of an author peculiarly qualified for his task.

That it was a herculean one may be judged from the author's own account of it in his preface.

That by such an amount of patient labor alone could such a task be fittingly accomplished, is evident from the statement, by the author, of its character and scope.

We have devoted so much space to setting forth the origin and character of the work that we can spare little to treating of the actual contents; the résumé we have just made will leave, however, no room for doubt, we think, as to its invaluable characteristics. Nowhere else can such an epitome of materials for our country's military history be found; none who would be familiar with that history should be without it, and certainly no one who has a relative or dear friend a graduate of the Military Academy, or who has been much associated with men and things connected with our military service, can well dispense with these volumes.

We cannot close this notice without calling attention to the author's triumphant vindication of the graduates and of the Academy from the charge of "disloyalty." Here by accurate numerical comparisons he proves that

"The statistics show that the West Point part of the army has been by far the most loyal branch of the public service; that nearly four fifths of its graduate officers remained faithful; that one half of those from the South stood firm by the 'Stars and Stripes'; and, in the battles for the Union, that one fifth of those engaged laid down their lives, more than one third, and probably one half, were wounded, and the survivors can point with manly pride to their services, here recorded, for the preservation of the nation.

"Can Harvard, Yale, Columbia, Union, Princeton, or any other college in the land show a higher record of patriotism and sacrifice? Assuredly not, for their Southern graduates espoused the rebel cause almost en masse. Should then these noble seminaries of learning be aspersed as nurseries of treason because they did not retain all their élèves in the Union fold?"

After showing how important an element to military success in war, and to the organization and management of the great bodies of troops suddenly called together to subdue the Rebellion, were the graduates of the Academy, and the military knowledge which the Academy has been the means of disseminating through all classes, the author exclaims:

"How insignificant is the expense of this great establishment, which has had an existence of two thirds of a century, at a total cost during that long period of usefulness not exceeding the nation's outlay for carrying on war during a single week of the closing years of the Rebellion! And since 1802, when it was created, the average annual appropriations have not been more than those for the maintenance of a squadron of cavalry."

In another place he affirms that the integrity of its graduates is proved by the fact that but two per cent. of the entire number have been cashiered or dismissed from the army, and nearly all of these for dissipation, and purely military offences.

We have said enough, we think, to give a comprehensive idea of the value of such a work, and of the thoroughness with which it has been executed.

PREFACE TO THE SUPPLEMENT.

Not being able to incur the heavy expense of publishing an entire new Register of the Officers and Graduates of the United States Military Academy, I decided, in deference to many requests, to revise the edition issued by me in 1868, and to add this Supplement which continues the Military and Civil Histories of deceased graduates to the date of their death, and of the living to January 1, 1879; also giving to this latter date the complete records of the services of all who have graduated since 1867.

Every effort has been used to make this volume as complete as possible; but, with all my exertions, I have failed to trace some graduates in civil life, and many of those in the military service did not reply to my circulars asking for information, or forwarded their communications at too late a date to be used in this work, I have therefore had to rely mainly upon official data kindly furnished to me by the various bureaux of the War Department, which, though supplying all important essentials, do not give many interesting details known only to the graduates themselves.

It was my intention to have added complete Biographical Sketches, which I had carefully prepared, of the prominent graduates who have died since the publication of my former Register; but I found, besides making this volume too bulky, the cost of printing them would far exceed the amount of my subscriptions.
